

Center for Teaching and Learning in Community

 AT STONY BROOK UNIVERSITY

Become ESOL Certified in Five Courses

Fast-track Option for Teachers

Stony Brook University's Center for Teaching and Learning in Community is pleased to announce a new program offering for teachers looking to expand their certification to include ESOL. There is more demand than ever for teachers who are certified in ESOL to be able to provide integrated English as a New Language instruction. This short, 5-course sequence is a convenient and flexible program that can be completed 100% online and will be offered exclusively through Teacher Centers at a reduced rate.

Find out how to join our next cohort, meet program faculty, and ask questions about the program at our upcoming online information session.

Join us on Wednesday, May 26 at 4:30 pm for a 30-minute information session online via Zoom.

REGISTER NOW

About the Center

Stony Brook University's Center for Teaching and Learning in Community (CTLC) provides opportunities for engagement, development, innovation and outreach among different education communities on Long Island, throughout New York State and beyond. The Center, located within the School of Professional Development, works with P-12 teachers and administrators to provide resources, support and training.

Facebook

Instagram